FALL FATAL FOR MINISTER

The superintendent of the Lynchburg District of the United Methodist Church died from injuries received when he fell in the snow Friday night.

Dr. Lewis W. Darst of 2222 Rivermont Ave. was fatally injured when he slipped in the snow at about 9 p.m. Friday and fell striking his head on the steps of the front porch.

He was taken to Lynchburg General Hospital by the Lynchburg Life Saving Crew where he underwent surgery. Dr. Darst died Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Darst had been a resident of Lynchburg since June, 1964, when he was named superintendent of the district succeeding Dr. Thomas J. Hawkins.

Hiring On A New Crew?

County forester Warren Taylor (far right) is now hiring on a three-planting crew. Rather, he's explaining to Industrial Cooperative Training Coordinator Appomattox High School that there are 50,000 loblolly pine seedlings on his truck ready for planting in Appomattox County. The seedlings cost $50 per thousand. Over the next 30 years these seedlings will grow an average of 500,000 pounds of wood per year. Some planted in Appomattox have been thinned for pulpwood on 11-14 years. All of the VCT students here whose parents planted loblolly pines when they were infants would now have enough income to pay for a year at college. Left to right are Taylor, Jim Elder, CO truck; Alton Luckett, Tom Elder and Tim Scruggs. Also, Kenneth Robinson, Wayne Moore, Betty Jean Moore, Carolyn Franklin, Nancy Osborne, Ronnie Bryant, Earl Austin and Warren Taylor.

RETAIL SALES $12.4 MILLION

The authors especially wish to thank the Appomattox Chamber of Commerce for assistance in compiling data.

Interviews with various businessmen of Appomattox confirmed Long's hypothesis that a large proportion of the retail business in the town of Appomattox does come from areas covered by the local newspaper, post office and telephone exchange, and so, from within the county. Interviews also confirmed the fact that Pamplin area residents patronize Pamplin for some goods and services and go to Farmville for other. The other major exception to Appomattox - Town shopping are those residents of the western side of the county who 'gravitate toward Lynchburg.

The author pointed out that the Appomattox town trade area does extend beyond county lines, particularly to the northeast and southwest.

Long says that this does not mean that all or even most of the residents of Appomattox do all or even a major portion of their shopping in the town of Appomattox. Results of the study show, he said, "that most Appomattox County residents had strong economic ties with the town, did shop there frequently, and were in a position to more regular shoppers."

Continuing, he said, ". . . . many of them shopped in Appomattox regularly for some goods or service, e.g. food shopping or banking, but they seldom shopped for others, e.g. clothing and furniture."

It is has listed potential sales for several general categories of consumer expenditures, estimates of sales potential to businesses living in the Appomattox Trade Area: grocery, $5,500,000; Auto purchasing and operating, $5,400,000; clothing, $1,500,000; Medical care, $500,000; recreation, $500,000; home repair and beautification, $500,000; hardware, $750,000; service stations, electricity, carpentry, etc.), $2,500,000.

Long says that Appomattox has a $7 1/2 million sales potential. He lists as a conservation estimate of the market for consumer goods and services: $17,500,000. He thinks there's a $2,500,000 potential for tourists' goods and services. An additional $5,000,000 can be spent in wholesale goods and services and $2,500,000 in industrial manufacturing sales. Of $40,000,000 in retail sales potential, $17,500,000 already is being spent in Appomattox, leaving a potential of $22,500,000 for new retail sales. Long says that a large proportion of this potential is in the area of automotive sales and services and agricultural supplies.

Long says much smaller proportions of sales potential in such categories as clothing, furniture and automobile sales.

He states it unrealistic to assume that Appomattox merchants could get all of these sales potential, but feels that with the addition of some types of businesses, some expansion of present facilities and with a strong merchandising program, as additional sales could be obtained.
